Feng Shui

Feng Shui is a way of arranging the environment, or the area around you. It is based on ancient Chinese beliefs. In Chinese, Feng Shui means "wind and water." According to Feng Shui, the way that you arrange objects affects your success, health and happiness. When things are placed properly, they create feelings of balance and harmony. They also make you more likely to be successful, healthy, and happy. Feng Shui has been popular in eastern countries for many years. Now, it is becoming popular in western cultures, too.

People began to study Feng Shui over 3,000 years ago in China. The United States was introduced to Feng Shui during the California gold rush of the 1840s when many people came looking for gold. The Chinese immigrants who came to California brought their belief in Feng Shui. Now, more than 160 years later, Americans are learning a much easier western version of Feng Shui, and many are beginning to believe in its benefits.

According to Feng Shui, there are many simple things you can do to give your home more balance and harmony. Most importantly, your home should be clean, organized and in good condition. That means it's important to keep your windows clean, replace your old light bulbs, and fix anything that breaks. Also, make sure that the path to the front door has good lighting and is neat. You should avoid clutter (a lot of things in a messy way) in your home as well. Things are cluttered if there are piles of clothes, books or papers in the room. Rooms where the furniture is carefully arranged and everything looks nice have more harmony and balance.

There are many similarities between Feng Shui for your home and Feng Shui for your workplace. Some of Feng Shui is common sense. Think about your office or study place. Where is the door? When you are at your desk, is the door beside you? Is it in front of you? Is it behind you? If the door is to your back, you might want to move your desk. How can you feel comfortable if you can't see who might be coming to your room? Your workplace, just like your home, should be clean, organized, and in good condition. That way you will be more successful at your job.
